STUDENTS THROW A PARTY

While Halloween is long gone, the memory of the children's party held by New College students on that night will be remembered by quite a few youngsters. Idea for the party sprang up less than a week before Halloween when Assistant Dean of Students Dr. Arthur McA. Miller suggested it. Second-year student Kit Arbuckle of Chattanooga, Tenn. was intrigued and began enlisting help on the project. Response from the student body was enthusiastic and in a few days more than 60 students were working on publicity, decorations, games, food, sound and light. Through schools and churches, as well as by publicity in the newspapers, children up to junior high age were invited. Some 300 showed up including students from Newtown and Tallevast who were brought to the campus by student-driven bus. The youngsters who attended found a spook house, fortune tellers, a pumpkin patch with a giant pumpkin, make-up tables, apple bobbing, games, candy and toys as well as a closed circuit television hook-up classroom work and 10 hours of pool work to be certified by the Florida Scuba Assn. Recreation Coordinator Frank Meyer said that fortunately for the underwater scholars, the college pool heater was turned on November 1.

ANNUAL DINNER RESCHEDULED

The annual New College Appreciation Dinner, given jointly by the Zinn family and the Trail National Bank and attended by members of the college and the area business communities, will be held Tuesday (November 14) at Zinn's Restaurant. A student panel, with President John Elmendorf moderating, will discuss the contemporary college student. Trail Bank Board Chairman Thomas F. Icard again will be program master of ceremonies.

in which the trick and treaters could see themselves in costume. To create atmosphere, there were figures of all shapes hanging from trees, weird noises being broadcast, and special spider forms projected on wall surfaces. As the party ended at 9 p.m., a great portion of the student body pitched in and in less than two hours removed all traces of the evening so classes could resume on schedule in the morning. Cost of the evening was borne from student activity funds, which were contributed to by each student. Chairman Kit eloquently praised the work of the student body in joining in to make the party such a success.

ATHLETICS BEING SPURRED

An upsurge in athletic activity took place during the past week on campus:

The New College soccer team, an informal group coached by Mexican student Migual Tapia, played a team of students from Sarasota High School Sunday and scored a 6-0 win.

Two students, Sven Donaldson and Bill Nunez, took the college's Sunfish class sailboats to a regatta in Stuart and learned some of the intricacies of competitive racing. Neither finished high in the standings but each came away determined to enter future intercollegiate competition.

Arnold Tresh of Venice, a qualified Scuba instructor, is teaching weekly classes in the underwater sport and some 20 students have enrolled. They must take a total of 10 hours of
