TEST GROUP MEETS HERE

Meeting on the New College campus next week will be a group of teachers, administrators and writers who make up the Commission on Tests of the College Entrance Examination Board. The Commission was appointed by the College Board to review all the board's existing examinations, to gather evidence of the need for change, and consider what kinds of tests may be needed 10 years ahead.

Commission members will be in Sarasota for two days and spend most of that time in meetings in Hamilton Center under the chairmanship of Dr. David V. Tiedeman, professor of education at Harvard University. The commission is made up of many famous persons in education including college presidents, deans, professors, scientists, admissions officers and writers.

The commission was appointed only last year by the CEEB to provide one of the periodic reviews of its tests and to suggest changes in light of educational and social changes. CEEB is a nonprofit membership association of 782 colleges and universities, 237 secondary schools and 88 associations. It was established in 1900 to aid in the transition of students from school to college. Services and programs include guidance and admissions tests administered to about two million students yearly.

with old friend Jonathan Slott, director of the college's capital campaign. The two have been working together on doing a scenario of one of Eunson's books, "The Pearl King," Eunson spent a busy three days here. Monday he addressed the members of the Ringling Chapter of the Florida Public Relations Association, Tuesday met with area newspaper and radio executives, on Wednesday counseled students who were interested in journalism careers and in the evening gave a public lecture on news coverage in Southeast Asia. With the area press, he went into an off-the-record session which included unpublished background on notable events and personalities.
