NEW FELLOWSHIP WINNER

Third-year student Anna Navarro became the latest student to boost the growing record of graduate placement success when she received word this week that she had been admitted to Princeton University's Woodrow Wilson School of Public and International Affairs. Objective of the school is to increase the flow of talented persons into the nation's and the world's service. Its aim, the Princeton graduate catalog says, "is to give students a rigorous graduate education in applied social science. It presumes that leadership will increasingly come from those who command the growing body of knowledge and the analytical techniques and insights of the various social science disciplines."

Like most graduate students accepted to the Woodrow Wilson School, Anna has been offered a fellowship worth $2,000 a year. Admission is considered highly selective.

Anna, who is a philosophy major, is a native of Cuba now living in Hallendale, Florida.

WIVES OUTSLUG COEDS

Age proved superior to youth again Sunday when wives of the faculty and staff turned back the coeds in a rousing game of softball. Led by such sluggers as Mrs. Peter Odell, Mrs. Arthur McA. Miller, Mrs. Frank Meyer, and Mrs. Nick Ellis, the wives outslugged the students. The coeds generously allowed the wives to use third-year student Jim Frisch as a pitcher. This year's score of 24 to 10 avenged a defeat by the coeds last year.

EXAMINATION TIME AGAIN

First- and third-year students end their second class term tomorrow (Friday) and on Monday begin their second Independent Study Period. For beginning students, this will be the first Independent Study Period they will be allowed to travel off campus for research and study. Most of the third-year students, especially those intending to graduate in July, will be completing work on their Senior Project, an intensive piece of research which has occupied much of their time all year and which is due in early June.

For the second-year students, though, next week is a particularly trying time. The first two days of the Independent Study Period are set aside for the Preliminary Examinations. The Prelims, as they are known, are given to each second-year student to test his progress in the major field. Passing the prelim is a ticket to continue studies. Failure has serious consequences for the student.

PARENTS WEEKEND SUCCESSFUL

The first Parents Weekend, held on campus last Saturday and Sunday, proved to be one of the most successful events ever held at the college. More than 70 parents attended. They came from as far away as Oklahoma, Wisconsin, Massachusetts, and Michigan, and enthusiastically endorsed the idea of forming a parents group.

An unexpected hit of the whole weekend was a series of skits staged by a group of students under the direction of second-year student George Wargo. With the help of Jean Feingold, Sally Woodmansee, Cheryl Hess, Claudisa Blair, Gary Williams, and Pat McCartney, Wargo produced a fast-moving revue with skits and songs, mostly based on topical sources. The students did it all themselves, building props, improvising lighting, borrowing props and costumes. Mary Blakely was the pianist and David Schwartz and David Tekler did the lighting. A packed room of parents and students gave them a rousing ovation.
