FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Cheryl White, a third-year New College student from Aiken, S. C., has been awarded a Fulbright Fellowship and will spend next year at the University of Rennes in France.

Cheryl, who is studying French at New College, said that in the French university, located in the northwestern area of the country, she will be enrolled as a regular student studying medieval literature and linguistics.

After her year abroad Cheryl plans to return to an American university to begin her study toward a Ph.D. in French and then to teach on the college level.

Cheryl's educational future on her return is assured since she already has received offers of fellowship awards from three universities. Duke University awarded her a James B. Duke fellowship and both Yale University and the University of Pennsylvania also have offered her similar awards for study.

In addition to these honors, Cheryl also was named to the honorable mention list for Woodrow Wilson National Fellowships.
